International direction for Four Seasons

2010-12-09

Paradise Beach Limited has appointed British company Davis Langdon as project manager of the Four Seasons Hotel and Residences in Barbados.

Davis Landon is a UK headquartered, global construction consulting firm specialising in project and cost management. The company brought in the Four Seasons Canary Wharf on budget and on time following the demise of the original contractors and has a wealth of experience in seven-star hotel and resort construction management.

Colin Scaife, chief operating officer for Paradise Beach Limited said: "We are extremely happy to announce the appointment of Davis Langdon in the role of project manager for the Four Seasons Barbados"

"Davis Langdon understands the world-beating quality we are aspiring to and they come with the support of Four Seasons.

"Davis Langdon have hit the ground running and are completing their project analysis and creating the tender documents they will issue to Barbadian contractors in around six to eight weeks time." Senior Vice President, Design and Construction of Four Seasons John MacKinnon, said: "Four Seasons is thrilled that Paradise Beach Limited has appointed a world class project management company to oversee the Four Seasons' Barbados project."
